

OUT AND ABOUT

Petaluma
SUNFLOWER LOVE

Amy Streckfus and Curtis Garlick fell for each other while acting on the set of Netflix's "13 Reasons Why," and now the community has fallen for their upstart sunflower business, CA Sunflower Farm (CA stands for Curtis and Amy). They're open on Sundays in rural west Petaluma, and can deliver cheery bouquets or bring sunflower pop-ups to parties. "Each day is different," says Streckfus. "It's exciting to continue meeting the community." Open Sundays and by appointment. 3365 I St., Petaluma. casunflowerfarm.com -Luke J. Straub

Santa Rosa
FLAMINGO RESORT TRANSFORMED

The landmark neon sign hasn't gone anywhere, but after a $20 million renovation, the Flamingo is once again a place to be seen. A new, dramatically flared porte cochère hints at the stylish, Palm-Springs-meets-Wine-Country vibe inside, including a lineup of contemporary art (don't miss the rope installation from San Francisco's Windy Chien), plenty of jungalow and flamingo accents (love the embroidered pillows!) and mint-green Trimline phones. The biggest draw remains the hotel's heated pool, which boasts new dining options, a cold-water bucket challenge, and soon, a vintage trailer repurposed into a hip bar. As summer opens up, the pool will be popping with events like dive-in movie nights and lunar celebrations.

From $189 per night. 2777 Fourth St., Santa Rosa. 707-545-8530, flamingoresort.com -Dana Rebmann

Dive-in movie nights will be back this summer by the resort's pool.